Because the grid-control Audion was the only configuration to become commercially valuable, the earlier versions were forgotten, and the term "Audion" later became synonymous with just the grid type. His reunion with Norwegian nature after his return resulted in a new interest in harmony and classical composition. Self-portrait in Front of the House Wall Munch produced an exhibition poster for the Norwegian Art Exhibition in Copenhagen, using irony to express his opinions about the conditions in the neutral countries Denmark and Sweden during the First World War. That year, Munch printed colour lithographs and his first woodcut at Auguste Clot. In early in what may have been the first public speech by radio, de Forest's smothered thoughts on this subject culminated in the publication many years later of his philosophical novel, The Mountain on the Desert
