When Gotzkowsky asked for a deferral during the Amsterdam banking crisis of Frederick took over his porcelain factory, now known as KPM. Frederick helped transform Prussia from a European backwater to an economically strong and politically reformed state. Frederick had despised Polish people since his youth, and numerous statements are known in which he expressed anti-Polish prejudice, [67] calling Polish society "stupid" and stating that "all these people with surnames ending with -ski, deserve only contempt".
