I appreciate that people are attached to their opinions, but if you can't back them up with citations, what basis have you got for objecting to their removal from this page in favour of a view thoroughly supported in the published literature? I'm sure there are many linguists and other academics who realize the size and influence of Germanic loanwords so their input would be appreciated as proper sources for citations. Can you explain more clearly what your concerns are with the current layout and what you want it to look like instead?

AncientGermanicstudiesWikipedia: There is also the problem of the map not being labeled with dates despite being in the history section. I've never heard the two examples that were previously the only ones cited, but I am sure the two I added are better known. All five groups are equally related to the Indo-European base.
