Not All Who Wander Are Lost But Maybe Some Are

Not All Who Wander Are Lost may refer to: "Not all those who wander are lost", a line from the poem "All that is gold does not glitter", written by J. R. R. Tolkien for.

Sometimes, Those Who Wander Are Lost | HuffPost

Philosophically, that can sound super adventurous and mystical, but realistically, some people do in fact wander because they're lost. Go figure.

"Not All Those Who Wander Are Lost..." (But Some Are)

This phrase means that not everyone who is not working at their expected position is unfulfilled, that is some people tend to seek enlightenment and their desire.

How had he ever persuaded himself that his money-mad burg would rescue him all by itself, this Gotham in which Jokers and Penguins were running riot with no Batman or even Robin to frustrate their schemes, this Metropolis built of Kryptonite in which no Superman dared set foot, where wealth was mistaken for riches and the joy of possession for happiness, where people lived such polished lives that the great rough truths of raw existence had been rubbed and buffed away, and in which human souls had wandered so separately for so long that they barely remembered how to touch; this city whose fabled electricity powered the electric fences that were being erected between men and men, and men and women, too? We might be present in that Some People Who Wander (Are Lost), but would we be alive in it? Now every nest held happy mates, and hart and hind slumbered blissfully safe in their lair.
