The basic salary of parliamentarians is linked by regulation [44] to a reference salary. If a policymaker can expect to see accrual contribution differences in the year in which policies begin, those differences would provide an important impetus for sound policy. The notional employer contribution rate is the contribution rate that would be required to fund the benefits accruing to serving members over the next three years on the basis that superannuation benefits are accrued uniformly over a member's period of service.

Prior to 26 September net earnings did not include tax or VHI or similar health insurance. Serving and retired members of the Australian Defence Force have legitimate grievances in relation to superannuation matters.
